BORED OF ED

As a high school teacher I don't see MAD very often in our school library, but I stumbled across one lying on a reading table yesterday and have spent several enjoyable hours reading and laughing and reminiscing. You see, as a 10-year-old boy more than 40 years ago it was MAD that began my decline into the pits of satire, sarcasm and disrespect of authority. I now, of course, inculcate my current students with the same attitudes, and have never been sorry for it. Thanks, MAD, for driving us all a little bit insane — and thus closer to the edge of sanity itself.

Ross Klongerbo, Orlando, FL

Dental Ross — Whoa, you lost us on that last quote there, Professor — that's pretty deep! I guess you had plenty of time to come up with it while devoting "several hours" to reading a single, 52-page issue. Several hours?!? It doesn't take us that long to write and draw an issue — that must be one gem of an English department you teach in! —Ed. P.S. Hey readers, are you a professional educator who has funny stories involving MAD? If so, send it to: "Bored of Ed." c/o MAD Magazine, 1700 Broadway, New York, NY 10019!

Make A Dumb Wish Foundation™

I have been a MAD reader for about a year now and my dad read MAD a lot when he was a kid. I'm writing because I have a dumb wish that only the Make A Dumb Wish Foundation™ can grant. I say this because if you suggested anything to my dad he would not be able to ignore it. My dad is a philosopher and our family is going away from home for a year and we have not yet decided where to go. My dumb wish is that you could tell him to go to a cool place that would be fun to visit. Really, anywhere except Toronto, Canada (that's where he wants to go).

Conor Burke-Smith, Ames, IA

Connie — Here at the Make A Dumb Wish Foundation™ there's nothing we like better than granting the wishes of young impressionable youths. We feel we have the perfect solution — move to Walt Disney World's Epcot Center in beautiful Orlando, FL! That way you have the delightful world of Disney and your dad can enjoy the flavor of Toronto at the Canada Pavillion! FYI park hours are 11AM-9PM. Thanks for writing and enjoy the happiest place on Earth! —Ed.

TEARS OF A TOWN

A few summers ago in MAD #467, my picture made a brief appearance in a segment called "What Kind of Person Reads MAD." Suffice it to say, at the time, I was quite happy to have my face appear in such a place as MAD. But now, I look back on that picture, and am a little angry for a few reasons: my letter was not printed, my picture was below a grandma giving the finger, you spelled my town wrong and my letter was not printed. So, I am asking you on behalf of myself and the people of Bradenton, Florida, to print this letter and right this wrong you have bestowed. Plus, I wouldn't mind going to my friends and saying "Ha! I got in a second time, schmucks!"

Nick Contino, Bradenton, FL

Nick or Treat — After issue 467 came out, we were flooded with letters from the residents of Bradenton, FL, thanking us for misidentifying the town and therefore distancing it from a loser such as yourself. So to the good people of Bradenton, you're welcome! —Ed.

P.S. In your letter, you misspelled "appearance." Kind of hurts your spelling credibility, Nico, doesn't it! —Ed.

ENVELOPE OF THE MONTH

The battle rages on! In MAD #480, we announced that in their Envelope of the Month competition, Dan Root and Matt Handfield had dropped out, making Jim Hutchings the de facto winner. Frankly, we were glad to put the whole thing behind us. However, it seems we spoke too soon. We just received an envelope from Matt Handfield of Northampton, MA reopening the whole can of worms (by the way, that's Jim H. frozen in carbonite). Whoever you're rooting for in this battle, one thing's for sure, MAD About Star Wars is on sale now so run out and buy your copy today! (How's that for a shameless plug?)

HIDE AND SNEAK

I have been reading MAD for eight months now and I have finally decided that I should try to get on the Letters Page. People have tried for years to get on and hopefully that won't be me. Writing this letter makes me realize that you have to be stupid or do something stupid to get published! So, I'm going to tell the best MAD story that I can. We had to do our annual assessment testing, so they asked that each student bring reading material for when we completed the test. I could think of no better material than one of my MADs! I put it in a National Geographic magazine to attempt to hide it. But there was one problem — National Geographic is smaller than MAD! But I was sneaky and luckily got away with it despite the looks I got from the chick sitting next to me! Anyway, I doubt I'll get published on my first attempt, but prove me wrong!

Jordan Hull, Littleton, CO

Hullabaloo — What a funny coincidence! When we're stuck working here, bored out of our skulls, we hide our copy of National Geographic inside an issue of MAD so we won't get into trouble! —Ed.

STATUE OF LIMITATIONS

My wife gave me a subscription to MAD and that's when I first saw Monroe. Monroe's really the best thing that's ever been printed in MAD! Now I'm a big fan and I just had to make a statue of him! Please let me know if you like it!

Marco Kuipers, Amsterdam, The Netherlands

Off The Marco — Nice job, but please contact us again if your wife gives you a subscription to Playboy — we'd love to see what you create then! —Ed.

ALFRED E. GRAWP

Just wondering if you guys noticed the similarities between Hagrid's giant brother and Alfred E. Neuman? Well, if you didn't, you should get out more often instead of waiting for guys like me to make these comparisons. I won't charge you for this one, but I'm guessing that's because your publication has diminished my good judgment over the last 10 years.

Zach Witt, Deerfield, IL

I went to the movie theatre with my Mom to see Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix. It was an okay movie, but in the middle of it when they showed Grawp the giant, I thought I saw a resemblance between Grawp and Alfred!

Paul LoBue, Chesterfield, NJ

Muggles — We, too, noticed the similarity between our beloved, idiot mascot and that giant freak Grawp and promptly got on the phone with Harry Potter creator J.K. Rowling. When we asked her to explain herself, all she did was blabber on to us that Grawp is apparently gay. Before we could stop her, she also "outed" Neville Longbottom, Sirius Black, Dementor #3, Firenze the Centaur (well, duh!) and amazingly, the Sorting Hat. Enjoy re-reading the novels with this information in mind! —Ed.

MAD CELEBRITY SNAPS

Angela Lansbury looked shocked and delighted at seeing that MAD has called her "The AARP Sexpot"! I am shocked and delighted at appearing in MAD after reading it for a lifetime!

Reesa Woolf, Boonton, NJ

Cry Woolf — Nicely done, you not only got to meet the lovely Ms. Angela Lansbury, but you got a three-year subscription for snapping a shot of the Nifty Fifty's resident silver fox! Way to go! —Ed.

P.S. How was the Columbo convention?

WRITE OF THE LIVING DEAD

I have finished reading MAD #483 (the Zombie one). In all its funniness I found some inconsistencies and flaws. In your magazine you showed zombies eating people AND their brains. It can't be both, right? I always heard it was brains, however with the release of recent movies it shows zombies not caring about brains, just flesh. Plus, how could a rotting corpse pull open someone's head for their brains? Zombies are not that smart.

Steve Matthews, Honey Brook, PA

Steve Matthews Band — Here's a question for you: If a brain-eating zombie attacked YOU, how long would it take before he starved to death? —Ed.

HARRY POTTER READER ALERT!

Those lucky enough to have their letters printed in this issue will receive a whole cauldron of Harry Potter stuff! We're going to send you a Harry Potter interactive DVD game Hogwarts Challenge — play the game this season courtesy of our friends at Warner Home Video, a Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix 2008 desk calendar courtesy of our friends at Andrews McMeel, the DVD of Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix again courtesy of our friends at Warner Home video and Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix for the Wii home video game system courtesy of our friends at Warner Bros. Interactive Entertainment and EA! Don't get your Hogwarts in a twist if your missive didn't make it in, everything is on sale now!

SIB STORY

I have a problem with my brother. I was reading a MAD in my sister's room 'cause it is a lot cooler in her room. I had a whole bunch of teddy bears and pink stuff all over me when my brother kicked open the door, jumped in the room, and took a picture of me! Now he is going to show everybody in my school and my friends so what should I do?

Ben Sluggett, Grand Rapids, MI

Sluggo — What should you do? Well, when you have an embarrassing secret that you're desperately trying to keep under wraps, we would advise that you NOT write in to an internationally-published magazine describing that very secret in vivid detail! To sum it up, you're screwed, dude! —Ed.

ANOTHER READER ALERT

From wizards to demons! We're also giving away The Demonata #5: Blood Beast to everyone whose letter was published this month, courtesy of our friends at Hachette Book Group, USA. For more information please visit their website at www.darrenshaw.com.

GRAPHIC NOVEL REVIEW

THE AMAZING SPIDER-MAN:
IRREVERSIBLE TERMINAL DEMISE, VOL. 1by J.J.M. DeMichelzyski and Todd Scott Ballbag Jr.
Marvel Comics, $24.95

For over half a century, superhero comics have had three unbreakable rules. One, there's always time to banter back and forth in the middle of throwing a punch. Two, the new Aquaman series is SO gonna get cancelled. And three, death is always fixable.

In comic books, the cemeteries come with revolving doors. Superman died, but he got better. Professor X became an ex-man, and then he came back. Wonder Woman bit the dust until she got her second wind. Phoenix died, then she didn't, then she did, then didn't, then did, didn't, did...what day is it today? From Green Lantern to the Punisher, from Colossus to the crappy Robin that everybody hated, comic books have taught the same lesson: getting yourself killed is something you can walk off.

Don't get the wrong idea, though. Coming back from the dead isn't a snap. It's a tough narrative trick that requires time travel, a previously unmentioned clone, a cosmic resurrection, an alternate dimensional rebirth, or an inattentive editor with a drinking problem. But it can be done. Somehow the only comic book figures who manage to stay permanently dead are the original creators, usually after decades of poverty.

For a prime example of the phenomenon, we need only to take a look at the never-ending Spider-Man saga. Many decades after being murdered by a thug, Peter Parker's beloved Uncle Ben returned from an alternate timeline, but was soon killed again by a third Uncle Ben, who was in reality not Uncle Ben at all, but a wily shape shifter. No, seriously.

Unfortunately, not all Spider-resurrections are that straightforward. Spider-Man's girlfriend Gwen Stacy was killed by the Green Goblin, who died himself one issue later. But Gwen's mystery clone debuted shortly after. Except it wasn't really a clone, but a different woman who'd been secretly infected with a genetic super virus that transformed her into a Gwen Stacy duplicate, a storyline which eventually led to five more Gwen Stacy clones showing up. Oh, and the Green Goblin didn't stay dead, either.

The low point came in 1999's Disarmed miniseries, in which it was revealed that Dr. Octopus' death "didn't count" because "he had his metal tentacles crossed."

Admittedly, after all the part-time corpses, it's hard to squeeze a whole lot of believable dramatic tension out of the death lemon. But writer J.J.M. DeMichelzyski has a few moves up his sleeve. In the first chapter of Irreversible Terminal Demise, he permanently kills off a random guy whose last name is Spinderman. This kind of rare suspense will keep the reader on the edge of his toilet seat, wondering who the next three characters to die will be...and whether they'll all be the same character. Volume One ends on a shocking cliffhanger, as the original radioactive spider from 1962 makes a stunning return.

This book is a must-purchase for all fans who want to know exactly which unforgettable story will be expunged in eight months, retro-revealed as a psychic illusion implanted into Spider-Man's head by the Sandman's twin brother. You'll die if you miss it! Well, not DIE die.

IT'S THAT

Is it possible for a human to discover the key to happiness and prosperity through killing innocent canines? For Falcons quarterback Michael Vick, the answer appeared to be "yes" as he welcomed, then slaughtered, numerous pitbulls on his Virginia property. This is the unforgettable tale of Ripley, a larger-than-death dog, and one of the few pitbulls to survive Vick's fighting ring by impishly hiding under cars and savagely biting anything that came close to him. Anonymous, who was involved in Vick's Bad Newz Kennels and is now preparing to testify against his former friend in return for a reduced sentence, perfectly captures the non-uplifting culture of pitbull fighting. Dog-haters and illegal kennel owners alike will laugh at Vick's mischievous electrocuting antics, cry after he's caught, and finally cringe as the Atlanta QB tries to convince the public that he's found Jesus. All told, however, the graphic depictions of animal mutilation and the literal breakneck action of Michael & Me will leave certain readers cheering for Vick's lawyers to play the race card, find a loophole, or do whatever it takes to have their hero back to doing what he does best: bankrolling hateful, blatantly illegal bloodsports!*

2 BUSH BREAKS PRESIDENTIAL RECORD FOR TIME OFF VACATION DAZE

George Bush is zeroing in on a long-standing record even more hallowed than Hank Aaron's 755 homers Ronald Reagan's presidential vacation mark of 436 days. Experts said it would never be broken, yet as we go to press, Dubya is on the verge of surpassing the Gipper's remarkable relaxation achievement with a year on the job still to go. Bush has taken about 70 vacations, during a war no less! If FDR took off that much time (note: he didn't, and he served FOUR terms!) you'd be reading this introduction in German while munching on strudel. It's monumentally dumb!

IMUS "NAPPY-HEADED" HOST

Professional loudmouth Don Imus has a well-documented history of making racist and homophobic "jokes." But this year his unwise crack about the Rutgers women's basketball team rebounded on him badly and cost the wrinkled old geezer his job. As we go to press, the "I-man" is mapping out his comeback. Yet something tells us his trip back to the top will take a lot longer than his unplanned trip to Nowheresville.

WALTER REED ARMY HOSPITAL SCANDAL TOYING WITH SOLDIERS' LIVES

George Bush and his snivel of neocon chicken hawks sent American soldiers to war with vague goals, no exit strategy and vehicle armor thinner than Nicole Richie after a night of purging. So why was anyone surprised that when injured troops returned home, the Bushies provided them with the same kind of well-planned care they did Hurricane Katrina victims? Since Bush vacillated between being oblivious and not caring about the deplorable hospital conditions, next time he needs a colonoscopy, maybe he should check himself in to Walter Reed's infamous Building 18 and just hope a rat doesn't crawl up his ass.

THE ANNA NICOLE SMITH PATERNITY TRIAL WHO'S YOUR DADDY?

Even before Anna Nicole's corpse was in the ground, a parade of losers, opportunists and creeps came out of the woodwork to tout the legitimacy of their sperm. Was the daddy of Anna's child her ghoulish lawyer, Howard K. Stern, or was it frosted-haired nitwit, Larry Birkhead? Or was it a long-shot like Zsa Zsa Gabor's pervy husband or O.J.? (There was a dead blonde, so odds were good O.J. had some involvement.) The whole debacle was enough to make a grown man cry — and that grown man turned out to be presiding Judge Larry "Weepy" Seidlin.

PARIS HILTON THE ORIGINAL DOLLY PART 2

She's made movies (including porn), acted on TV and written a book. But this year, Paris Hilton finally did something we could all get really excited about: serving time as inmate #9818783! Amazingly, her jail sentence wasn't punishment for her career (even though her CD arguably warranted the death penalty). While in prison, Paris "found Jesus," the first guy she ever encountered that she didn't end up boning. She soon emerged a changed woman. No longer a self-centered, shallow, useless media whore, now she was a self-centered, shallow, useless media whore felon. All in all, it's been quite a trip.

THE GIANT TOY RECALL A CHINA PATTERN

When Toys "R" Us first rolled out their classic jingle, "I don't want to grow up, I'm a Toys "R" Us kid," it probably never occurred to them that being a Toys "R" Us kid could actually prevent children from growing up. Unfortunately, with this year's recalls of millions of hazardous Chinese-made toys, everyone from toy companies to retailers to parents discovered that sweatshop-produced products tend to have sweatshop-grade quality control. And we always thought the most nauseating thing coming out of China was the hot and spicy Szechuan Octopus platter

ISAIAH WASHINGTON BASHES HOMOSEXUALS GAY'S ANIMOSITY

Not long ago the national pastime was baseball. Now it's gay bashing. As usual, right-wing natemonger Ann Coulter flew for the number one spot. Hot on her spiked heels was NBA dribbler Tim Hardaway. But surpassing them both for sheer stupidity and intolerance was Grey's Anatomy actor Isaiah Washington. By outing and repeatedly calling fellow co-star T.R. Knight the "F" word, Washington exposed himself as a world-class s-hole and it cost him his job on the hit TV show. Maybe Washington should consider a career in the movies.

WILD HORSES' ASS: KEITH RICHARDS SNIFFS HIS FATHER'S ASHES

After the passing of a loved one, musicians are often inspired to write touching tribute songs. But for human skeleton and bad-ass rock & roll Keith Richards, in an interview last spring, the Rolling Stone guitarist claimed he mixed his papa's remains with cocaine and then inhaled them. While we haven't seen the will, we're fairly certain Keith's old man didn't require that his ashes be scattered upon his son's remains.

SCOOTER LIBBY A MAN FOR ALL TREASONS

After leaking the name of an undercover CIA agent, ending her career and endangering her life, Dick Cheney's right hand hatchet man, Scooter Libby, was convicted of perjury and obstruction of justice. But the same day he was ordered to prison to serve a 30-month sentence, President Bush commuted his sentence. (Compared to Libby, Paris Hilton did hard time!) Bush said the punishment was "excessive." Huh? While Governor of Texas, Bush approved 131 executions! But when it comes to his cronies, his "mercy" knows no bounds. We'd tell you more, but you can probably fill in the blanks from here.

THE CREATION MUSEUM YOU CAN'T DARWIN 'EM ALL

Finally there is compelling evidence that the theory of Evolution is wrong! For proof positive that man's intelligence has not evolved in eons, consider the Cro-Magnon brained imbeciles behind the recently opened Creation Museum in Petersburg, Kentucky. SANJAYA INDIAN BUMMER

We're generally jealous of no-talents who make millions of dollars. But not so with the king of no-talents, Simon Cowell. Cowell reportedly made over $45 million last year as judge on American Idol. But we think he was underpaid. After all, the poor bastard had to sit through every second of every excruciating, soul-crushing performance of Sanjaya Malakar, the tone-deaf song-smith who suffered perennial bad hair days and, by comparison, made William Hung sound like Josh Groban. We can only pray that we've heard the last of this Michael Jackson wannabe.

DIARY OF A WII OWNER

DAY 1

12:05 PM - Just got my Wii - can't wait to get it home!

12:36 PM - First Wii injury: pulled my groin muscle while trying to move the entertainment center containing my PS3, Gamecube and Xbox 360 to make room for the Wii

1:32 PM - Wow, it really feels like I'm boxing! (Because I am! I've spent the last hour fighting with my little brother over who gets to play Wii Boxing first.)

DAY 2

8:00 PM - I just played Super Monkey Ball. Banana Blitz (you tilt the Wii Remote to guide a "monkey ball" through a zany obstacle course), Kororinpa. Marble Mania (you tilt the Wii Remote to guide a marble through a zany obstacle course). The creativity of Wii game designers is just staggering! (you tilt the Wii Remote to guide a ball of water through a zany obstacle course).

DAY 3

8:41 PM - Instead of playing tennis and baseball with my friends, I spent the day playing a game system that simulates playing tennis and baseball with my friends.

DAY 4

5:04 PM - Just downloaded the Internet Channel. Now I don't think I'll ever need to leave the couch! Wa-hool!

5:06 PM - Discovered that there are no porn blockers on the Wii

5:15 PM - Convinced my mom (hopefully!) that what she saw was just me playing with my Wii Remote.

DAY 5

4:50 PM - Wow, SofaTube.com and WiToob.com both let me watch YouTube videos on my television through the Wii's Internet Channel! Now I can finally see YouTube videos as they were meant to be seen: choppy, blurrer, but definitely waaaay bigger!

TIPS TO AVOID IDENTITY THEFT: A FUNDALINI CONSUMER FRAUD FEATURE

- To limit your liability in the event of theft, maintain a $5 maximum credit line on your credit card.
- Since thieves never bother to check for sensitive information in anything that looks like junk mail, consider having your name legally changed to "Occupant."
- When ordering online, always give a fake address. True, you'll never receive packages sent to you, but no one will know where you really live, which is much more important.
- Some thieves now use sophisticated techniques to retrieve passwords stored on your computer's hard drive. Avoid this by keeping your passwords stored on a yellow Post-it stuck to the front of your computer screen.
- Always update your Windows operating system with the latest security and firewall fixes from Microsoft. Once installed, they will more than likely prevent you from ever again being able to log onto the internet, where most identity theft occurs.
- Steal and use someone else's identity, so if someone else steals it, they haven't stolen yours — you follow?
- To keep your identity totally secure, register it by sending your screen names, passwords, credit card numbers and mother's maiden name to: MAD, 1700 Broadway, NY, NY 10019.

Britney and the Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Year

I went to a New Year's Eve party in Las Vegas and I collapsed and had to be carried out. I woke up feeling awful so I went to a special facility to get better, but the place was yucky so I left the next day. Then I gave myself a haircut and oops, I wound up bald. I could tell it was going to be a terrible, horrible, no good, very bad year. So I went out clubbing and drinking.

I woke up feeling awful again, so I went to a different special facility to get better. Then I found out that my ex-husband was trying to take away my kids. I love my kids and give them all the Doritos, soda and chewing gum they want! I was so mad I attacked a photographer's SUV with an umbrella.

And the whole time this was going on, I kept forgetting to wear underwear.

I went to court and all these people who were supposed to be my friends said bad things about me and how I treat my children. The judge ordered no drinking, no drugs, no partying, and he was going to be keeping a close eye on me. Just what I hate, an adult telling me what to do.

I could tell it was going to be a terrible, horrible, no good, very bad year. So I went out clubbing and drinking.

To help revive my career, I set up a photo shoot with OK! magazine, but they got all mean and angry just because I used their fancy designer gown to get fried chicken grease off my hands and clean up after my dog.

And still I forgot to wear underwear.

Tonight was MTV's VMA awards and I opened the show. But everyone was mean to me just because I showed up a few hours late and a little drunk. I thought my lip syncing and dance routine went great, but everyone said I looked fat in my black bikini. I think I even heard some boos. I was so upset, I didn't go to my parenting classes, or for my drug test or even to court to see the judge who was threatening to take away my children. I could tell it was going to be a terrible, horrible, no good, very bad year. So I went out clubbing and drinking.

While I was out taking my dog for a drive I found out that I lost custody of my children. And the tabloids are saying my life is a train wreck.

I think I'll move to Australia. I need to find out where that is. And if they have some fun places to go clubbing and drinking.

THE SOPRANOS FINALE BADA BING! BADA BOO!

Sopranos creator David Chase built a career on torturing fans of his legendarily overrated series by making them wait eons between progressively disappointing seasons. But with his now infamous cut-to-black "un-grand un-finale" he solidified the show's position as the most pretentious in television history. Whether or not Tony got whacked is still open to debate. But one thing is certain: they should have treated the show's script like it was Big Pussy — and just thrown it overboard.

[4 December|04:27pm]

[mood]  curious

Here's what I wonder about James Bond: I get that he has a license to kill. But what do you have to go through to get it? I like to think that first, you have to have a learner's permit to kill. Like, you can go around killing people, but your mom or dad have to come with you. And then maybe there's a written portion, where you have to answer a lot of multiple choice questions about when it is and isn't okay to kill.

[7 December|03:43pm]

[mood]  irritated

Today in history class, Mr. Campbell started off by telling us that today is the 66th anniversary of Pearl Harbor. Doug Spivak raised his hand and said that Pearl Harbor came out in the summer, but Mr. Campbell explained that he was talking about the actual attack on Pearl Harbor, not the movie. And then Doug said, "Wait: the stuff in Pearl Harbor really happened?" And Mr. Campbell said, yes, it really happened. And Doug said, "Well, what about Armageddon? Did that really happen, too?" And Mr. Campbell said no, that that one was fake.

And so then for about five minutes Doug listed movies, and Mr. Campbell told him whether the stuff in them really happened or not. (Zorro: No. The Alamo: Yes. Saving Private Ryan: Yes and no. Raiders of the Lost Ark: No. Dodgeball: No. National Treasure: No.) When Doug asked about Pirates of the Caribbean, Mr. Campbell refused to answer any more questions.

[mood]  anxious

We're doing Secret Santa in my homeroom. We picked names this morning, and I got Aaron Reynolds, who used to beat me up and give me wedgies in elementary school. Luckily, Chet got Julie Underhill, who I've kind of liked since sixth grade, and he agreed to swap names with me. So now I have to figure out what to get Julie that: A) she'll really like, and B) costs under $10, 'cause that's the limit they set. Which sucks, 'cause you can't really get anyone anything good for ten bucks. Chet pointed out that you can get ten small chillis at Wendy's for $10, but I don't think that's the sort of thing you want to unwrap from your Secret Santa.

[12 December|07:45pm]

We had a school assembly today where we all had to listen to the kids in the choir sing Christmas songs, plus one Hanukkah song and one song about Kwanzaa. Then they read the story The Gift of the Magi, which is about this woman who sells her hair to buy her husband a watch chain for Christmas, only he's sold his watch to buy her combs for her hair. And the moral of the story is that it's better to give than to receive, although to me, the bigger news in the story is, some people buy hair. That's so weird.

[12 December|08:32pm]

I've been thinking about it, and I think a good story would be "The Birthday Gift of the Magi." It's about a woman who sells her hair to buy her husband a watch chain, and he's like "Oh, hey... thanks", and then he doesn't give her anything, because it's not her birthday. And they both just sort of sit there, feeling kind of awkward.

[15 December|02:17pm]

Chet and I went to the Twelve Oaks Mall today, to find our Secret Santa stuff. We went through the entire mall and didn't find anything for Julie, but at Best Buy, Chet found a discount bin of $10 DVDs, so we tried to find the one Aaron Reynolds was least likely to want. I hope he enjoys Legally Blonde 2: Red, White and Blonde.

[16 December|05:39pm]

[mood]  discouraged

Today Chet and I went Secret Santa shopping at the Oakwood Mall. We didn't find anything for Julie, and we looked everywhere — even Victoria's Secret. Actually, we didn't really think we'd find anything for Julie there — we just liked having an excuse to see what the inside of the store was like. I asked if they could help me find something for one of my classmates, and the saleslady said, "Is this your girlfriend?", and I said, "No, just a girl in my class." And the saleslady said, "There is nothing here you should buy for her."

[18 December|06:52pm]

[mood]  excited

So, tomorrow's the Secret Santa exchange, and I really needed to buy Julie's gift today, so Chet and I went to the super-nice mall, The Shops at Twin Oaks. First we spent awhile at The Sharper Image, trying out all their stuff — I think that, when I have a place of my own, everything I own will be from there. It'll be awesome: I'm gonna get the indoor waterfall and the giant resin replica of Predator and the robotic massage chair. I don't know why mom and dad don't buy stuff like that. Anyway, I wound up getting her present at the Godiva Chocolate place. The smallest box they had was $15, but it looked really tiny, and only had, like three things in it, so I wound up getting her the one that costs $30. It's more than I'm spending on any member of my family, but then again, I don't really want to ask any of them out.

[mood]  annoyed

Today was the big gift exchange. We all dropped our presents in a box, and then they were handed out. Chet got a copy of the third Harry Potter book, which had clearly been read by whoever gave it to him. I got a note saying that my Santa didn't have time to buy anything, and that he'd give me ten dollars later. Meanwhile, Julie opened up her present and was all annoyed and like, "Oh, chocolate! Great! Someone's trying to make me break out and get fat." So Aaron offered to swap his DVD with her. And she was all, "Oh, that's so sweet of you! I love this movie! Thank you so so so so much!" And then it came time for everyone to tell one another who their Secret Santa was, and I told Julie, and she kind of said "uh-huh" and went back to talking to Aaron.

One of these days, I'm going to write a story called "The Gift of the Tadi." It's about how it's better to give than to receive, but sometimes, it just sucks all around.
